Home - Discover Little Guyana, New York
Discover Little Guyana, New York

For Americans who hail from Guyana, Little Guyana is full of familiar

Guyana has a high rate of emigration. There are about 140 000 Guyanese immigrants living in City

Guyanese of South Asian descent are concentrated in large numbers in Richmond Hill (Queens) and neighboring Ozone Park. The neighborhood is called Little Guyana and smells and sounds of Guyana are just about everywhere. And food, of course. Liberty Avenue is full of Guyanese restaurants. Guyanese cuisine is spicy and delicious and there are plenty of restaurants that sell roti.

Most Indian restaurant have banished roti, but in Little Guyana, roti is a point of national pride. This thick flatbread has made its way from Georgetown, Guyana up to kitchens of Queens, New York.

Little Guyana is peppered with mosques, churches and temples to accommodate population's Muslims, Christians and Hindus. To many Guyanese religion is a central fact of life. Temples are the nerve center of the Guyanese community.
